

Saudi Arabia Delegation Position Paper

by

Sam Giustizia

The country that I am going to be representing at SSUNS is Saudi Arabia in the general assembly committee on the UN Framework on Climate Change (UNFCCC). In this assembly, Saudi Arabia would most likely be focused on continuing oil production and distribution. Therefore to portray this role, I will be acting entirely in the interest of continuing to manufacture and sell oil without delay. I will not be interested in preserving the environment, or making any unnecessary alliances that do not benefit my country and our beliefs. The reason why I am relevant to this committee's topic is because I will be representing the top oil producing country in the entire world. Meaning that my country's economy is almost entirely based on disregarding the damage we are causing to the environment and continuing to manufacture and sell oil.

My policies on this issue will be to do whatever is in my power to continue to keep the manufacture and distribution of oil continuing at its current pace, or increase it. I will not be interested in alliances that do not benefit this ideal. The only actions that my country will take towards solving this issue is to do our part in reducing the greenhouse gas emissions of our country by the amount that was established when Saudi Arabia became a signatory on the Paris Agreement. Unless the actions proposed by my fellow delegates benefit the country of Saudi Arabia, it is unlikely that we will be support or even entertain any proposed alliances, policies, actions, or resolutions.

My country will be more inclined to support and aid countries with connections to oil. This includes large producers of oil such as USA, Russia, and China, and this also includes major consumers of oil such as USA, China, and India. Since my country will be primarily acting out of the interest of maintaining or increasing the current production and sale of oil, these countries will be the most influential to our actions. In addition to these countries, the delegation of Saudi Arabia also is interested in maintaining relations with its neighboring Persian Gulf States: Kuwait, Bahrain, Oman, Iraq, Qatar, and United Arab Emirates.
