

FROM THE OFFICE OF:
The Right Honourable Henry David Reginald Margesson, PC
Secretary of State for War

Members of Parliament, Diplomats, Honourable and Decent Fellows:

Our world is at war. The freedoms and fancies we have taken for granted are all too close to being snatched away from us, never to be given back. If we, global representatives for proper and fair behaviour, give in now, we will be laughed at as a weak and subservient people. For the sake of King George, for the sake of Britain, for the sake of the World, we must now take action to rid the globe of this horrid conflict.

The greatest opposition we face is the possible conglomerate of Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin. Together, these three dictators would completely take the East of Europe for their own and make it nearly impossible for us to assert any military effort to liberate this area. However, each of these three authoritarians have one thing in common: paranoia. In order to destroy the possible dastardly alliance between these three men, we must plant seeds of doubt into each of their minds regarding the others. Stalin especially, with his personal paranoid psychology, will react very violently if he believes he is under a threat of attack from a supposed ally. If we work using covert operational spies and undercover methods utilizing the technology of those like Alan Turing, as well as issuing propaganda across the continent, potentially with airlifts of propaganda pamphlets, we can work to destroy this threesome before it becomes anything serious without the direct use of military conflict.

Who we choose as our allies is just as important as who we have proclaimed as our enemies. The most important thing we have to do is secure Central and Eastern Europe. In order to adequately surround this area, we must immediately reach out to Mustafa İsmet İnönü, prime minister of Turkey, to ensure his cooperation with allied forces and to provide a base for action near Eastern Europe. Provided we can isolate Stalin from Hitler and Mussolini, The USSR will serve as an allied force to the East of German territory, while Turkey will act likewise in the South. With forces from these two nations moving in through Greece and the Ukraine, we will have a clear channel to Germany from the East. In terms of the West, we must work to maintain the integrity of France lest it be lost between the Fascist forces of Spain and Germany. In addition, the United States, India, our other colonies, and Australia will provide exceedingly useful to our cause.

Something we must utilize is the weaknesses of our enemies. Through exploitation of innate authoritarian paranoia we can work to deal with Germany and Italy, assuming we can enlist the help of the USSR. Another area of concern is Asia. If we neglect intervention in China, Japan, and the rest of the Pacific, our enemies might not be so reckless. China is on the brink of civil war between the Communists and the Nationalists, and Japan's Emperor Hirohito is a puppet of a thinly veiled Meiji police state. If we can keep these uncivilised nations engulfed in internal conflict, we can nearly ensure they will be too busy to involve themselves with the World War, seeing as in such a conflict they will most likely act against the West and thereby Britain.

FROM THE OFFICE OF:
Secretary of State for War

The most imperative values we must keep in mind during this conference are resilience and unity. If we stay violently loyal to any given party, we will make ourselves no better than our opponents. Although we are all fine British gentlemen, we are by no means dealing with fine British gentlemen. To quote myself, I am not afraid to tell it like it is and respectfully call a member of this body a contemptible little shit when he is being a contemptible little shit. I will have order in this committee, and I will not have rash decisions being made. As the official council to Prime Minister Churchill, I will recommend to him what the body sees fit, but only if it is a sound and responsible decision. We have a duty to defend our nation's honour, and protect Britain from unspeakable conflict and unthinkable destruction. We have a duty, gentlemen, to protect the world. I recommend we do it admirably, as our King commands and as I know we can.

Yours Truly, with Exceptional Sincerity,
