Women and Sustainability

Syria believes in equal rights between men and women, however it should be according to our governments religion, Islam, and there in that there are some fundamental differences between genders. It is only for women's safety that Syria enforces certain restrictions on women's rights. There has recently been some development in what Syria believes, however there are still some beliefs that do not neutralize men and women to be equals. Women should not be allowed to show their hair nither to talk to a man that they don't know according to the Quran, our Islamic holy book. They should wear something called a Hijab and if they don't do what is in our country's law they should be punished and depending on what they have done, it may lead to a death sentence. Syria believes in women's rights and also their safety because what happens in Syria is Syrian problem so they should adhere to the rules in place for their safety such as; using hijab, not talking to men who they are not related to and such.

A woman's job is to do take care of men and their kids so there is no point in working outside of their house because they will have enough work at home if they want to do all of their responsibility that they have such as; cleaning the house making meals and so on.

Women in Education and Employment

Syria has seen an increase in women in the work field is the last few years. Nowadays they can work in only women offices or shops that men are not allowed inside because Syria believes that in a all women office they will be more comfortable for sharing their ideas and talking to each other and also they will be safer and problems will not happen that often like some free countries such as; USA, England and ...

Women are allowed to study as long as their parents and after marriage their husband does not have a problem with that, however there are some roles for female students and they are; they can not study in a mix school and they need to be in a female school or university, they should have use their hijab and with some kind of clothes that does not show the body they should not take some courses that are not allowed for females such as Medicine, Engineering.
