

Topic: Supporting and Accomplishing Education 2030

Country: Haiti

Committee: United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization

The Republic of Haiti believes that in order for Education 2030 to be achieved, developing nations need to play a larger role in aiding developing nations. We believe that in order for all students to receive an equal education there needs to be an international standard for primary and secondary education. However, the delegation of Haiti also believes that the majority for funds for the international educational standard needs to be provided by either the UN, NGOs, or other charitable organizations. Developing nations cannot support these education systems. In Haiti almost 90% of primary and secondary schools are privately run because the government cannot afford to provide an education equal to those of the private schools.¹ Literacy rates and school enrollment have both gone up in Haiti, but there is still much work to do before a free and public education can be comparable to that of a private education or an education in a developed nation. An international standard for schooling can make the goals in Education 2030 easier to achieve, Haiti also believes that in order to support an international education standard developing nations need the assistance of developed nations.
