Third Servile Revolt

Varro (Jacob Maury)

I am incredibly honored to be attending this meeting. I have championed the rights of the slaves for a long time now and am grateful I can continue to support them. While we have gained some victories, we have a long and difficult road ahead. The Roman Military is unified and strong. Our first priority as a group is to organize our efforts and unify our followers. As a Roman writer, I can also garner support for us among literate and academic groups, a demographic unreachable by most in this committee. This will help us gain our footing in this uphill battle against Roman Tyranny.

However, my pull in these communities will not halt there. We are a group of gladiators and champions. We must use this to our advantage. We must form our image to one of glory and respect, not barbarism. In this way even if we are unsuccessful in our efforts, we will have gained supporters that recognize us as more than just objects to be traded. This means reinventing our image in the eyes of the public.

We must also use the Roman religion to our advantage. If we can convince people that we have been chosen by the mighty Jupiter or Neptune, our power becomes limitless. This will not be an easy task, as we have been excluded from religion and society. I will help fight for the rights of the slaves in any way I can. The time of slavery has ended, and we are on the brink of a new era. Together, we will be victorious!
